POLITICAL NEWS AND GOSSIP.

Tilden and Butler Attracting the Lion's Share of Public Attention—Notes.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—[Special.]—There is a lingering hope in the minds of many democrats that Samuel J. Tilden if tendered unanimously the nomination for president, would, notwithstanding his letter of declination, consent to accept. An intimate friend of Tilden's, who talked with him on Wednesday and Thursday of last week, said to your correspondent to-day: "Under no circumstances would Tilden accept the nomination. He knew that the honor would be given him spontaneously and unanimously when he wrote his letter of refusal, and the letter was written to prevent the use of his name in the convention. If the convention should attempt to force him to accept the nomination its work would be in vain, for no power could induce him to take the honor."

"Is it true that Tilden wishes to see Governor Cleveland nominated?" asked your correspondent.

"No, it is untrue," was the reply. "Tilden does not like Cleveland, personally, and would regard his nomination as injudicious. If Cleveland should be nominated Tilden's subscription to the campaign fund would be very small. The fact is Tilden appears to be disgusted with politics. He will not discuss political affairs, except with a few of his intimate friends, and he seems averse to expressing opinions regarding candidates. I think he takes very little interest in the subject, and does not particularly care who is given the nomination. I judge, however, that he considers Randall the strongest man."

GEN. BUTLER'S CHANCES.

Ex-Governor Benj. Butler, of Massachusetts, is the bete noir of the friends of Cleveland. "Nobody can tell what Butler will do at Chicago," said an old democratic politician at the capital to-day. "If a man is nominated whom he dislikes, and whose election he would consider a party misfortune, it would not be strange to see him turn in and elect Blaine. As the candidate of the greenbackers and laboring men Butler is one of the most prominent factors in the approaching campaign, and his followers will do just what he tells them is right. It would not surprise me if Butler should capture the democratic nomination, in which event there would be an astonishing break in party lines, and the result of the election might surprise his bitterest enemies."

It is reported here that Governor Abbott of New Jersey will present Butler's name to the convention. It is hardly believed the report is true. The majority, if not all of the delegates, will vote for Bayard, unless a solid vote is given Cleveland, in which event it will be difficult to keep the New Jersey men away from the choice of the empire state. Bayard's friends are sparing no effort to strengthen his position, and unless Cleveland is nominated on the second or third ballot the friends of the Delaware candidate expect him to win.

It is learned that there has been a gradual but steady change in the attitude of the Ohio delegation since the adjournment of the state convention. Hoadly's strength is gaining, and it is expected that the minority of the delegation only will be for Thurman. Two hundred Californians at Chicago will make the air ring with cheers for "Old Snuff."

NOTES FROM NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, June 30.—The county democracy resolved to-night to send 450 members to the Chicago convention. They start Friday next by the West Shore road. The Palmer house will be their headquarters.

The anti-monopolists have resolved to form a national anti-monopolist league, with branches in every city in the union.

Theodore E. Tomlinson made a speech to-night advocating the nomination of Tilden and Thurman at the Chicago convention.

Jeffersonian democrats of Brooklyn will send sixty members to the democratic national convention at Chicago. They leave Saturday next. Their headquarters will be at the Leland house.

DON'T KNOW WHAT HE WANTS.

[Special.]—A great many democrats now affect to believe that Tilden's letter did not mean what it said, and that the old man is still waiting for the nomination. It is possible that they think him too much of an imbecile to know his own mind.

GONE TO EUROPE FOR MONEY.

NEW YORK, June 30.—[Special.]—The Sun says: Chauncey M. Depew sails for Europe Wednesday. His mission is to raise money among American bankers in Europe for the Blaine and Logan campaign.

TOULON, June 30.—At 7 this evening one death from cholera had occurred since 11 A. M.

LONDON, June 30.—It is generally admitted that the worst of the cholera crisis is over. One feature of the disease has been the shortness of the time between seizure and death. This would seem to indicate that the malady is Asiatic cholera.

IN THE CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES.

PARIS, June 30.—In the chamber of deputies today Prime Minister Ferry opposed the amendment defining revisable points in the constitution, without binding the chamber to give its action to these points, on the ground that the government proposals for revision were an essential part of the programme of the ministry, who would be unable to continue in office if they lacked the confidence of the chamber. The chamber then rejected the amendment, 290 to 59.

ORANGE OUTRAGES IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., June 30.—Two Orange outrages are reported from the northward. At Twillingate sixteen loaded guns were fired into the house of Captain Wrey, and windows smashed with huge stones. The Wreys are one of the only three Catholic families in Twillingate. At Green's pond, Harlow, four southern vessels took refuge from a southwest gale and floating field ice Tuesday last. Orangemen attacked the crews, when on shore, and pursued them to their vessels with large ballast stones, smashing the companion doors, skylights and cabin furniture, breaking the bulwarks and forcing the vessels to push out into the storm and ice.

An outrage was perpetrated Saturday night by the crew of the bark Lady Elibank. They broke into the Catholic church of St. Mary's, in St. Mary's bay, and demolished the furniture and appointments of the sanctuary, destroyed the tabernacle, abstracted the chalice and other sacred vessels, smashed the candelabra, strewed debris about the streets, and in various ways desecrated the church. Five were arrested. As soon as the knowledge of the desecration of the church spread among the Catholic population not less than 300 boats were manned for the purpose of scuttling and firing the vessel. Only the influence of the parish priest and supplying merchants prevented the destruction of the ship and cargo.

DOMESTIC DISPATCHES.

The Sullivan-Mitchell Match Proves a Complete Swindle.

JOHN L. APPEARS TOO DRUNK TO FIGHT.

Rumors of Huntington's Embarrassment Again Circulated in Wall Street—News Items from Various Eastern Points.

NEW YORK, June 30.—[Special.]—Sun: Boston—Sullivan and a big crowd left together for New York. He is not fully recovered from the spree and it seems hardly possible that he can face Mitchell in first class condition: but his friends say he can afford to be handicapped, and still knock out Mitchell without difficulty. A few of his intimates who know the champions' disposition, are rather fearful that they may be unable to keep him straight to-morrow. It is quite probable that he will go in the ring more or less stimulated, and the point that is agitating his backers is whether they can restrict the supply of stimulant to a quantity that will cheer but not inebriate him. The champion's frame of mind this afternoon was such that it would brook no restraint. Betting continues light, for although the champion is off color, there are no Mitchell men in town. Insiders admit to-night, however, that if Mitchell ever can whip Sullivan he must do so to-morrow night.

THE AFFAIR A COMPLETE FIZZLE.

NEW YORK, June 30.—[Special.]—Ten thousand people thronged Madison Square garden to-night to see John L. Sullivan, the slugger, who was on the stage, and in a voice thick with drink announced, as he leaned over the ropes: "Gentlemen, I am sick; here's my doctor; he will testify that I'm sick." His features were bloated and swollen, his eyes bloodshot, and he had every appearance of having been on a protracted spree. Inspector Thorne and Captain Williams jumped on the stage, and a perfect storm of hisses, groans and curses filled the air.

Mitchell, looking very pale and almost crying, walked to the ropes and said: "Gentlemen, I am here and ready to fight. I am sorry to disappoint you, but you can see Sullivan is sick. I have been sick myself, but will do anything you say."

The master of ceremonies announced that Mitchell and McCaffery would spar, but the crowd shouted for Sullivan. The latter's doctor attempted to speak, but the crowd refused to hear him.

Sullivan walked unsteadily off the stage, and was immediately surrounded by a mob of excited people. A cordon of police closed around him, and escorted him to the door, where he entered a carriage and was driven to the Ashland house.

The crowd behaved in an orderly manner throughout, but when the gigantic fizzle was apparent only the presence of a strong force of police prevented a riot. The assemblage, however, dispersed quietly, and it was generally conceded that Sullivan's reputation as a fighter was gone.

THE BOSTON CROWD.

Seated in the reporters' inclosure were the Boston delegation, comprising many prominent municipal officers and sporting men. When Sullivan came on the stage they expressed no surprise at his condition, although it looked to outsiders as if they were well aware of the way the match would turn out.

Captain Cooke, editor of the Boston Police News, said to your reporter: "Sullivan has been drunk for four days. He was drunk when he arrived here, but he can whip Mitchell, drunk or sober."

Before the principals came on the stage, several mild settoes were indulged in by such celebrities as Murphy and Kelly Costigan and Nixy, Donovan and Steve Taylor, Johnny Files and Tom Allen, Fowler and Young, and Pete McCoy and Prof. Bagley. The audience wanted blood and not science and prolonged hissing followed every exhibition. From the fact that admission tickets sold for $2 and were hawked on the street by speculators for $5, finding ready sale at that price, it is a mystery what saved Madison square garden to-night from a free fight of huge proportions. It is estimated that the receipts amounted to $30,000.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT OF THE SWINDLE.

NEW YORK, June 30.—Between 5000 and 6000 people, including hundreds from Boston and Philadelphia, and large delegations from Baltimore and Chicago, went to the Madison Square garden to-night, to see the glove contest arranged to take place between John L. Sullivan and Charles Mitchell. The story circulated the last few days concerning Sullivan's drunkenness and Mitchell's malaria did not seem to shake the belief of the good natured public that the men meant to have a bona fide and exciting contest. In the early evening it was reported that both boxers were in good condition. The first part of the night's programme, in which appeared several members of the Sullivan combination and others, passed off pleasantly, the spectators giving hearty encouragement to the sparrers.

A few minutes before 10 the great John L. Sullivan, in street costume, staggered up the steps leading to the platform, accompanied by Billy O'Brien and another man, who was said to be Dr. W. H. Vanderpool of the Ashland house. O'Brien announced to the anxious crowd that the doctor had positively stated that Mr. Sullivan was too ill to spar. He said that rather than leave the people disappointed Dominic McCaffrey would spar Mitchell.

SULLIVAN AND MITCHELL SPEAK.

O'Brien was hooted, and the great Sullivan made his way to the edge of the ring, and supporting himself by the rope, he made a few remarks. He looked like a terrible example. His hat was unbrushed, and his clothes soiled; he was bloated in body, and his features and face were red and distorted, almost beyond recognition. Standing in the attitude of a lounger at a bar he said, in a hoarse voice that could be heard but a few feet away: "I cannot spar to-night; I am too sick. You think I'm drunk, but I ain't; I'm sick. I don't think it fair to give you a friendly set too with Mr. Mitchell, for you didn't come to see that." Then the renowned Mr. Sullivan was heartily hissed. Mitchell, who was ascending the platform while Sullivan was speaking, now came to the ropes, and had his little say. Mitchell looked somewhat pale and thin, and his lips were swollen and sore looking. The Englishman said: "I'm in no condition to spar myself. I have had it bad with malaria. I don't think it would be fair to Mr. Sullivan to have this match, as I am feeling pretty good to-night, and I came here to do the best I could, that is all there is to it."

The people cried "Shame!" and hissed. One shouted "Sullivan, you've lost your reputation;" and others made various depreciatory remarks. The crowd then slowly and sadly left the building. It is estimated that $14,000 was taken in by the management, and that $2500 covers all expenses, so that the Sullivan and Mitchell combination have $12,000 to divide as the result of their much talked of and extensively advertised combat.

HUNTINGTON AND THE C. P.

Stories of Their Financial Embarrassment Again Circulated in Wall Street.

NEW YORK, June 30.—[Special.]—The stories concerning Huntington and the Central Pacific, which have been on the street the past fortnight, have made an undoubted impression on the market, and are circulated to-day in connection with telegrams from San Francisco, in the Tribune and other papers, alleging that he had called on Charles Crocker for assistance, who also was driven nearly to his wits' end, but on the 23d inst. Crocker's private secretary, Green, was instructed to telegraph Huntington that three and a half millions in Southern Pacific bonds were forwarded that day. It is also stated, in connection with the crisis in the Central Pacific's affairs, that Mrs. Colton's lawyers would to-morrow apply for a receiver. It is the belief that the company is about [illegible] Southern Pacific stocks and bonds in [illegible].

Your reporter called on Mr. Huntington this morning, with the request that he should make an explicit statement regarding the above charges. Mr. Huntington referred the reporter to Mr. E. T. Colburn, who said, in reply to an inquiry, that "the Central Pacific is no in any worse condition than the New York Central and other big railroads. The banks are taking all the certificates they can get, but are giving out no money. We are provided with funds to pay all outstanding debts for a month to come. As soon as gold begins to come here from the other side, and cereals are shipped in greater bulk to England, these troubles will be ended."

Mr. Huntington rode down in the elevator with your reporter, to whom he said: "The statement in this morning's Tribune is a lie from beginning to end. I have paid no attention to the other newspapers. There is a very good element and a very bad hoodlum element in California. The latter class must have lies to feed upon, and the newspapers just now seem to be catering to them."

HUNTINGTON INTERVIEWED.

NEW YORK, June 30.—C. P. Huntington said this morning: "The Central Pacific interest, due July 16, is about $900,000, and the company has in bank about three times this amount. In regard to the Colton suit, I emphatically deny the story that there has been any unwarranted disturbance of the Central Pacific sinking fund. Only the Southern Pacific bonds belonging to the sinking fund were sent to New York. These are those accumulated to meet the state aid loan of $1,500,000, which mature July 1. These bonds were sent here to be used to pay for the state aid bonds, as contemplated by the mortgages. The allegations by Mrs. Colton, in her suit, are mere spite work, entered into to injure the credit of the parties she is endeavoring to blackmail. She attacks all the interests of the parties with whom she is litigating, hoping thereby to obtain something from them that is not due. Our counsel telegraphs that no application was made for a receiver for any of the railroad companies, except for a comparatively small amount of bonds and stock, that she claims interest on, and are subject to her litigation. The refusal of Judge Temple to entertain such motion in chambers may be taken as an indication that he will not allow the machinery of his court to be used for such dishonorable purposes."

WILL BE PAID AS USUAL.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 30.—Referring to published statements regarding postponement of the payment of salaries General Manager Towne, of the Central Pacific railroad, announces this evening that all the officers and employes of the company will be paid as usual, payment being effected over the entire system by July 10th.

The Bears Raid the Market Repeatedly, Forcing a General Decline.

NEW YORK, June 30.—Governments strong, especially 4½s. Railways were generally lower. Stocks opened strong, and in first sales there was a general advance of ⅛ to 1½ per cent. Soon the bears made a sharp drive at the market, and sold the whole list with great freedom, until after 1:15 P. M., when buying in for non-delivery gave a check to the downward movement. This caused a rally of ¼ to ½ per cent., but at the close the improvement was partially lost. Compared with Saturday closing prices are ½ to 4½ lower.

SPORTING NOTES.

ENGLAND NO MATCH FOR SULLIVAN.

NEW YORK, June 30.—Bill England, an English pugilist who came here a short time ago to try to make a match with John L. Sullivan, was given a benefit this afternoon. His set-to with George Rooke showed England to be no match for Sullivan, as Rooke fought him all over the stage, dealing him a number of stinging blows. Four rounds used up England.

A BASEBALL TEST CASE.

NEW YORK, July 30.—[Special.]—A test case was made here yesterday on the lawfulness of baseball playing on Sunday. Papers were made out a week ago on both sides, and yesterday, in the Sunnyside baseball grounds, in the presence of 5,000 spectators, P. Ryan, owner of the grounds, struck a ball across the field, and was promptly arrested.

Interesting Will Suit.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Suit was brought to-day by Mrs. Annie Fanning against the Right Rev. Patrick Terry, pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic church, this city. Complainant alleges that her uncle, Richard Fanning, died twenty years ago, leaving a will bequeathing a portion of his estate to her; that Father Terry has concealed this will ever since, and that the estate went to her uncle's heirs-at-law. She says Father Terry but recently told her of the will. Father Terry says that when Fanning was very ill, thirty-three years ago he attended the sick man; that there was a will [illegible], that Fanning recovered and lived thirteen years; that he [Father Terry] went elsewhere, and did not know whether the will existed at the time of Fanning's death or not.

Wire Fences Being Torn Down.

CHETOPA, Ks., June 30.—There is great consternation among stock men having ranches in Indian Territory. The sheriff of the Cherokee nation, with a squad of Indians, has been taking down all the wire fencing that incloses larger tracts than fifty acres, that being the limit allowed by an act of the Cherokee council. The sheriff confiscates all wire he takes down. He began the work south of Coffeeville, and is taking it down clean as he comes east. One thousand miles of fencing has been removed. The Indians seem to mean business, and evidently propose to eject all intruders.

Well Paid For A Drunken Husband.

CINCINNATI, June 30.—Mrs. Eliza Blakney to-day obtained a verdict for $5000 damages against Charles Green, a saloon keeper, in a suit under the provision which is known as the Adair liquor law, which makes a saloon keeper amenable to the wife of a drunkard, if he continues to sell him liquor after being warned by her not to do so. MECHANICS' LIEN LAW.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

Mr. Simon tell us why it is any more the business of the owner of a building to see that his contractor has paid all the material men mechanics, laborers, etc., he has employed than it is the business of such material men mechanics, etc., to see to the responsibility of the men they contracted with? The owner of a building contracts for construction or repairs with a man or firm. The contractor employs others and buys material. Why is the owner "in default" if he does not hunt up and settle with every such man before settling with the only party he has contracted with? And suppose there is a disputed account between the contractor and his employe, must the owner of the building determine this with the certainty of offending one of the parties and the risk of involving himself in a law suit over it? He contracts with a man in whom he has confidence, and with whom he is willing to do business. His contractor buys material of or employs persons in whom he has no confidence, and with whom he would have no dealings. Why should the law compel him to have dealings, disputes and law suits with them? Why should not the material man and the mechanics themselves see to the responsibility of the men they engage with? Are they incapable of doing their own business and looking out for themselves? Must the law make the owner of the building their guardian? The result would be that only those of assured responsibility would get contracts, and the mechanic of moderate means would be compelled to be a day laborer, for no builder is going to be compelled to become responsible for bargains he never made and knows nothing about, with persons he does not trust and would have nothing to do with.

I have great respect for and confidence in Mr. Simon, and I am impressed with the belief that there is an element of demagoguism in this business that is wholly foreign to him. SAY NOT.

The Ladies of Mount Vernon.

New York Mail and Express.

The annual meeting of the regents of the Mount Vernon association was recently held in Washington. It has been rumored that the association was in debt and would shortly apply to congress to purchase the estate, according to the terms of their charter. But the truth is the association is not only in the most flourishing condition but, beside owning the property without incumbrance, has a balance of about $40,000 in bank. The charter itself is an exceedingly wise one, and it has been well administered. Each state in the union is represented by a regent, and May is the meeting time every year. They take up their quarters at Mount Vernon, where there are accommodations for twenty or thirty persons, and occupy the quaint old rooms that are memorial chambers, each one of them. The furnishing of the house has been a restoration. So exact were the ladies in charge to reproduce the same effects that had prevailed during Mme. Martha's lifetime, that they secured scraps of the old rag carpet on the floors, and sent them to the east, where Turkish looms copied the designs made by Martha and her handmaids. The old mahogany chests of drawers, the dreadful old four-posters that look like coaches-and-four, the ridiculous old valances, the scraps of looking-glasses, were all resurrected from country houses, and were not "revivals" of ancient styles. But little of the furniture was left when the association got hold of the place, but with wonderful patience they got together some of what had been there, and pieced out the rest with much good taste and appropriateness. The grand piano given by General Washington to Nelly Custis, the daughter of his stepson, on her marriage, is in one of the lower rooms. It is a vast machine with three banks of keys, and gives out a terrible uproar to this day. The first Nelly Custis, Washington's stepdaughter, died at 22. In the lawn is shown Nelly Custis' rosebush, standing beside which she is said to have received her first offer.

Railroad magnate—"See here, sir! this won't do. You sell me that sugar at 10 cents a pound and I have just found out that you have been charging my son 15 cents for the same brand." Grocer—"But, you see, sir, your son lives in the next square, close by, while you reside a mile away; and I have been afraid that if I did not sell to you at a low price you would prefer to buy at some grocery nearer home." R. R. magnate—"I can't help that. You have no right to discriminate against my son in that way just because he lives near you." Grocer—"Well, I will stop it." R. R. magnate—"And let him have his sugar at 10 cents?" Grocer—"No; I will charge you 15 cents."—Philadelphia Call.

PACIFIC COAST.

Twenty-four Miners Killed by an Explosion at Nanaimo.

NINETEEN OF THE BODIES ARE RECOVERED.

A Chinaman Murders a Little Girl and is Immediately Lynched—A Rich Californian Kills a Chinaman—Notes.

VICTORIA, June 30.—A terrible explosion took place this morning in No. 3 shaft of the Wellington colliery at Nanaimo, by which 24 white miners lost their lives, and a large number were burned and injured. At the time of the explosion there were fifty men in the mine. At 1 o'clock p. m. bodies had been recovered, whose features were unrecognizable; at 6 o'clock P. M. fifteen bodies had been taken out. It is supposed that nine more are still in the mine. The cause of the explosion is supposed to have been accumulation of gas in the mine. The disaster is without parallel in the mining history of British Columbia. The scene at the mouth of the shaft was heartrending. Mr. Dunsmuir, the owner, left by special steamer for the scene of the accident this afternoon.

CALIFORNIA.

A Rich Man Kills a Chinaman.

SANTA BARBARA, July 30.—A fatal shooting affair occurred on Santa Rosa island, about thirty miles from here, yesterday morning. Alex. P. Moore, the owner of the island had a number of men employed, among them one Chinaman, Gee You, who seems to have been a very quarrelsome fellow. Mr. Moore was about to leave the island on his schooner, when Gee You wanted to come also. Mr. Moore said he should not. The Chinaman said he would, and then attempted to get aboard, whereupon Moore drew his revolver and struck the Chinaman over the head, knocking him down. The Chinaman jumped up, drew his knife and started for Moore when Moore shot him in the forehead. He then came over here, bringing the Chinaman, who died from the effect of the wound this morning. Moore gave himself up, and is out on $5,000 bonds, to await inquest on the body, at 7:30 this A. M. On account of Moore's immense wealth, the case causes considerable excitement.

California's Grain and Tonnage.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 30.—[Special.]—Discussing the grain and tonnage situation this morning, the Chronicle says: "Whatever may be the final outcome of the California wheat crop of 1884, it is very certain to be far greater than with her prospective tonnage facilities and immediate prospects of an opening in Europe, she can easily handle. It is true that we shall begin our new cereal year with an unusually large supply of shipping, say 150,000 tons register, but that, together with shipping on the way, and a similar amount expected to follow, say 200,000 tons register, must still prove very inadequate. Under the most favorable circumstances our wheat surplus cannot be shipped within the season, and in all probability the last of it will not get away before the end of 1885, and will not be finally marketed in England and the continent before the middle of 1886."

Shipping Intelligence.

Arrived, June 29: Bark Henry Buck Meyer, 18 days from Seattle, 1050 tons coal, to Oregon Improvement company; bark Mary Glover, Conner, 14 days from Port Discovery, 500,000 feet lumber and 600,000 laths, to Moore & Smith. Sailed: Ships Chandos, Curtis, Nanaimo. Sailed, June 30: British steamer Wellington, Young, Nanaimo.

The man who shot himself and wife of Fruitvale, on Thursday last, has been identified as August Schindler, formerly a barkeeper in this city.

Personal.

[Special.]—Edward Hall of Portland is in the city on business and will remain ten days or two weeks.

A SHOCKING MURDER.

A Chinaman Kills a Little Girl, and is Lynched by Avenging Neighbors.

LOS ANGELES, June 30.—Particulars were received to-day of the killing of a little girl by a Chinaman, near Mud Springs last night. News of the murder created the greatest excitement in the neighborhood, and immediately a large party started to search the surrounding country for the murderer. After a short time the searchers returned to camp, and reported that the dead body of a Chinaman was hanging to a tree in a canyon a short distance away. No questions were asked, and no further explanation was given. The name of the murdered child was Bessie Eldridge; she was between 8 and 9 years old, and the daughter of Z. Eldridge. Rumors as to the cause of the murder are conflicting. One report is that the little girl and her brother were out walking with their father and mother, when the little girl grew hungry, and with her brother started to camp to get something to eat. The boy soon returned, and stated that he had been abused by a Chinaman, who threw him in the water. Search was at once made for little Bessie, who was found dead, lying in the creek. She had been stabbed in the left breast, the knife taking a downward course, evidently causing instant death. From the appearance of the body the Chinaman had attempted rape, and afterward killed the child to conceal the crime. Another account says there was no attempt to outrage the child, and the murder was the result of pure fiendishness on the part of the heathen, who was an irascible, cross-grained fellow.

THE GREAT CHIEF JUSTICE.

W. W. Corcoran's Recollections of John Marshall of Virginia.

Interview in Cincinnati Times-Star.

"Yes, I remember Marshall very well," he continued, as he recalled the memories of that distinguished official, whose memory is now being especially honored. "He used to walk up in this part of the country, as it was then, from his boarding house on Capitol hill. He was a great walker. I can remember his figure now, clad in closely-fitting black clothes, with knee-breeches and gaiters, such as were worn in those days. I lived then in Georgetown, and the chief justice used to walk from his home on Capitol hill as far as Georgetown often, for he realized the benefit of an active life, as the people of the present age are beginning to do. Exercise is a great medicine for all, old as well as young. People who take plenty of exercise live longer than others. It is just the same with people as with horses. Take a fine trotting horse that is well cared for, and driven a great deal, and the chances are that he will live to a much older age than those less used."

"Was Justice Marshall as highly honored in life as in death?"

"Yes, he stood very high during his lifetime. He was universally honored by those who knew him, by everybody, indeed, as a man of great ability and of the highest integrity as a friend and citizen. Indeed, the whole supreme bench was a model of ability."

"Do you agree," Mr. Corcoran, "with the views expressed that public men of that date or former days were stronger intellectually than those of the present day?"

"If they were it was because of selection and not because the country had men of greater ability than it has now. The fact is, in those days there were more carefully selected men chosen to office; they were from the very best. In those days they did not take their richest farmer or their most prosperous merchant for a congressman or for this or that office, but selected their ablest man, the man who stood highest in intellect and integrity. The place selected the man to a greater extent in those days than now, instead of the man selecting the place, as is too often the case now."

An Aristocratic Demagogue.

Lord Randolph Churchill is now fairly a rival candidate with Lord Salisbury for the leadership of the tory party, Sir Stafford Northcote being in ill health and, at the best, too milk-and-watery for the time. Lord Salisbury has the advantage of being twenty years older, of having held cabinet offices and of having latterly been in close contact with Lord Beaconsfield; but he is intellectually arrogant and unsympathetic, whereas Lord Randolph has an eminently sympathetic manner and voice, which are in winning contrast to Salisbury's grim and frigidity. When Lord Randolph appeared bareheaded before a vast assembly at Birmingham, accompanied by his young and pretty wife there was seen the perfect historical type of the aristocratic demagogue, "ami du peuple" [illegible].

Rev. R. Hodgson, an English vicar, who has taken the lecture field, reconciles science and religion by arguing that pre-Adamite remains are nothing more nor less than fossil angels. A fossil jaw-bone, two feet long, of the pre-Adamite period, found in Kansas recently, must have belonged to a female angel, Rev. Mr. Hodgson's theory be admissible.—Cincinnati Herald.

VALUE OF THE PRESS.

What a Barnstorming Manager Thinks.

New York Dramatic Critics.

Freund's Weekly of May 22d has an amusing "reminiscence" anent Miss Gray's performance of "East Lynne," showing how some managers estimate the "press." The New York Herald had noticed the performance as follows:

"A very small audience witnessed a very bad performance of 'East Lynne' at the Third avenue theater last evening. Miss Ada Gray assumed the double role of Lady Isabel and Madam Vane, and the support consisted of Mr. John W. Thompson, who struggled unsuccessfully with the part of Archibald Carlyle; Mr. Phelps, who tackled Lord Mount Severn, and got worsted; Mr. Handyside, who wrestled with Sir Francis Levison, and suffered defeat; and Mr. Wells, who tried to be funny as John Dill, with melancholy results."

About noon the press agent presented himself to Mr. Watkins, the manager, and inquired as to the state of his health, hopes and exchequer.

"You're a fine press agent, you are!" said Mr. Watkins, hotly; "a takin' of a manager his hard-earned money and a standin' in front of the theater like a cigar sign, without a word to say for yourself! Why didn't you get to work last night? These here notices as the papers gave us is your fault entirely. It makes me sick to think on it. [illegible] of the Tribune, who I saw goin' into the theater alone. You might have given him a cigar and made the paper all right. There was the Times man just waitin' for a glass of beer, and for five cents you would have are had him. The Herald man meant all right, I could see, but there was no one to treat him to a drink and so he criticised us as he did. It makes me sick to even think of it. There again was the Sun man—a paper I had spent two dollars in for advertising—hanging round the lobby as if I had used his paper badly. He did not know what to write about us, but if you were any good you could have helped him out. I've whole columns of notices given Ada Gray in the west, and he could have reproduced a few of these in his paper. You don't seem to understand this newspaper business at all. Look at the way I am treated elsewhere! It could have been all fixed here by a little energy on your part and by 'setting up' for the boys. Sake's alive, I'm liberal enough. I wouldn't have begrudged $1 or so spent freely on the editors, to put them in good humor, so they could write understandingly of Miss Gray's performance. You know that."

There are other managers equally enlightened with this New Yorker in regard to the duties of the press."

The remains of Ben Allen, who was drowned while attempting to cross the Yakima river last Thursday, were recovered the next day.

The frequent showers of the past week have made a great change in the appearance and promise of fall crops, and farmers and gardeners are correspondingly happy.

The school board have employed all but one of the teachers who taught in the public schools last year. In addition to the number employed last year the services of Miss Bessie Paxton of Portland have been secured.

Hon. Robert Mays was seriously injured last Friday by falling from a tree twenty-five feet to the ground. Although severely bruised and shaken up, no bones were broken, and it is hoped he will soon be able to be on his feet again.

FOREST GROVE NOTES.

FOREST GROVE, June 30.

The M. E. church and grounds are being inclosed with a neat fence.

The approaching harvest is a promising one. Many fields are turning golden already.

There was an elk killed over on the Nehalem a few days ago. People say that Captain Tyler could tell who killed it.

Wild raspberries are found in great abundance within a few miles of town. Wagon loads of young people went berrying last Saturday.

The law forbidding the killing of deer goes out of force to-day. Several packs of hounds have been on short rations for a week in anticipation of a lively race to-morrow.

Messrs. George and Hiram Nayler have recently returned from a trip to Wilson river. They had a hard time as the trail was in a wretched condition. They killed two bears and caught all the fish they wanted.

One of the principal features of the celebration at this place will be the grand party in the evening. Vert's hall is being gaily decorated, and an unusually pleasant time is anticipated. I am informed that several couples from Portland will be present. All who come will be made welcome.

We are all getting ready for the circus at Hillsboro. Cole will do well in Washington county on condition that he presents a full programme with his full outfit; but if he divides up his show on leaving Portland, and takes but portions of it to the country towns, he can rest assured that he need not count on much of a harvest. Give us the whole show or none.

Messrs. Jonas and Jesse Blank of Chicago are here visiting their brother Stephen Blank. They came over the Northern and were highly delighted at the splendid and ever changing scenery along the road. They will remain at least two months, during which time they will visit some of the most important portions of the coast, especially the Sound, southern Oregon and California.

The Derby Dead Heat.

From the Pall Mall Gazette.

The career of St. Gatien, who divided the Derby after a dead heat with Harvester, affords a remarkable illustration of the vicissitudes of a race horse. In addition to doubtful and unfashionable parentage, he was such a mean, common looking yearling that his breeder ordered his trainer to sell the colt by auction during one of the autumn meetings at Newmarket soon after he was broken. The colt had previously been offered for sale privately at £100 to several people at Newmarket, including Hayhoe, Mr. Rothschild's trainer, who consented to take the youngster in liquidation of an account of £50, but declined to give the "century." As Sherwood had only two or three horses at the time, he consented to train a colt at thirty shillings a week, instead of the standard charge of fifty shillings, on condition that Major Bruce made it up to him if St. Gatien turned out well. He won all the three races for which he started at two years old, and, as his owner continued anxious to sell, St. Gatien was purchased by Mr. Hammond for £1,400 during the winter, with a contingency of another thousand if he won the Derby. Harvester, on the other hand, cost 3000 guineas at auction only a month before the Derby, and the dead heat between the pair has been waggishly compared to Hogarth's well known picture of St. Giles and St. James. Sir John Willoughby is an owner in the purple, but unlike the Maccabees, who boast of the possession of a boat of their own at the Flood, Mr. Hammond began life in Goldring's stable, at Newmarket. From that employment he worked his way into the position of confidential commissioner to many of trainers and jockeys at Newmarket—a vein of racing ore which has secured him a fortune.

The Chicago Tribune insists that the national democratic committee has made an egregious mistake in calling their convention at Chicago, and in the hottest week of the year. It fires the following encouraging remarks at the democratic pilgrims, who are already packing their gripsacks for the wickedest city in America: The delegates will meet here July 8th, and probably remain in session during the whole of that week. It is the hottest week of the summer in Chicago. It may be said to be the only week of the summer that is not at all. At other times, earlier or later, they would have half the solace of the cool lake breezes, tempering the fervor of the [illegible] as it is, they will come here in hot case, after riding through [illegible] nights, and remain in a hot building, with [illegible] [illegible] to add to the discomforts of sweating, [illegible].

THE BARTHOLDI STATUE.

A New York Lady Graphically Describes the Ninth Wonder of the World.

Paris Correspondence Philadelphia Times.

"Like the Brooklyn bridge novelty," a young Philadelphia lady writes from Paris, "you will soon be going to explore the wonders of the Bartholdi statue. I went up in it the other day, giving my little contribution toward paying the dear girl's (Libby, we call her) passage over to New York. This unique thing which confronts one in the Rue de Vigny, towering above the six-story houses, is really fine. The pose is simple, and majestic, and there are parts of the drapery that have the delicacy of work on a statuette. You can hardly realize that the folds of the huge robe are stubborn bronze. The surface is so wrought by the hammer that it gives the effect of mottled silk. Worth might be proud of the sleeve of her mantle. The gesture of the outstretched right arm is full of spirit, while the left, holding the tablet, forms, with the head, a beautiful balance in the composition. It seems sacrilegious to have an 'interior' to such a superb creature.

The entry is by the sole of the uplifted foot—they say a Chicago girl was the model—and a tall man can go in easily. Inside we [illegible] be looking up to the lantern of a Gothic cathedral, with numerous eyelets of light from the rivet holes piercing the gloom. We reached the head of a temporary wooden staircase. At New York there will be an elevator working in the great framework of iron which is to form the main support for the structure. The old cicerone tells us the tale of dimensions as we ascend. Reckoning from the coronet to what may be called the footstool the figure measures 104 feet 1½ inches—I want to be accurate—but it is higher to the hand. The pedestal of granite is to be 82 feet. From the surface of Bedloe island to the top of the torch will be 219 feet 11½ inches. Now, the monument at London, the loftiest isolated column in the world, is but 202 feet high; the Vendome column, 144 feet, and the Arc de Triomphe, 160 feet, while as for the Colossus of Rhodes, he stands but 140 feet in his stockings. Miss Liberty will beat him 70 feet and over. The stairs in the arm have not been completed, so we had to stop at the head, the last story but one, and there through the apertures in the coronet, all the glory of Paris bursts upon the view."

TAKING SHAD WITH A FLY.

A Hint to Some of our Sportsmen who Visit Young's River Falls.

Holyoke (Mass.) Letter to the New York Sun.

The shad season, on the wane elsewhere, is at its best in Holyoke, for here and here alone is the fish caught with a fly. No other shad can be said to have attained the dignity of rising to a fly. To those who have seen the Hudson river shad roll from the huge seine out on the sandy shore and kick the bucket in the most listless manner, with scarce a movement of their rainbow sides, or submit to the degrading gill-net with indifference, the very idea of showing fight, much less taking a fly, will seem absurd. The Connecticut river shad is not that kind of a bird—at least those who safely run the gauntlet of seines and weirs below and reach Holyoke are not. Here, for half a mile below the giant dam is a stretch of swift, shallow water, a third of a mile in width, wherein the fish pause in their upward journey to take a breath before tackling the dam.

In the cool of the evening anglers congregate on the long bridge toward South Hadley, armed with short poles and several hundred feet of line, wound upon reels of the largest sort, and the usual complement of variegated flies. The long line is paid out, and requires but little manipulation, unless it be to guide the fly as it dances among the eddies into some half quiet water, where it is snapped up with an avidity that would do credit to a Rangeley trout. Old North river fishermen say that a shad will not take a hook, and couldn't if he would, owing to the peculiar construction of his mouth. Either this does not apply to the Connecticut shad, or else he wears a different style of mouth, for he can take a hook, and does it vigorously. The running river, full of rocks, snags and bushes, together with the long reach of line, combine with the gameness of the fish to make his capture no easy task. He races amid tortuous channels and entangling logs in a way far different from his diffident North river cousin, and often baffles the attempts of his captor to reel in and haul him thirty feet through the air to the bridge. In this case the man at the business end of the rod clamors for aid, and a punt puts off from shore, manned by a small but enterprising and energetic Holyoke hoodlum, who, with the skill of experience and a landing net terminates as game a struggle as any fish but the salmon makes. As the shad season closes the black bass come into the fore and furnish the best of sport. The bridge at South Hadley falls may be said to be among the best fishing grounds in New England, though but few people know it.

A CANINE BALL PLAYER.

How a Cincinnati Poodle Officiates as the Short Stop or Left Field.

Cincinnati Enquirer, June 2.

The owner of the poodle gave a whistle and pointed at the ball, whereat the animal in a moment dropped its lethargic appearance and began to leap around in a state of great excitement, barking at the top of its lungs. The young man drew off, as the saying is, and sent the ball high into the air, the quick eye of the poodle following it from the start, but not until it turned and began to come down did he move. Then, dodging about for a few moments, as the ball fell he opened his capacious mouth and caught it with a sock that was heard a hundred yards away.

"Want another trial?" asked the owner, as his dog laid the ball at his feet.

"No, that settles it," replied the young man. "What nine does he belong to?"

"Oh, he belongs to a private combination" was the answer. "Now I'll show you what he can do. Get out there, Jack!"

The dog ran into the field, and as his master delivered a red-hot ball directly at him he received it without a quiver, finally taking a seat with his owner in the twenty-five cent row.

"Is that dog for sale?" inquired a gentleman who sat next him.

"No, sir," replied the owner. "He's worth about $50 a week to me as a ball player. Between you and me, if I can ever get a bet started with a Johnny Fresh like that chap over there, that the dog won't muff a ball, I'm sure of the money."

"No, I never gave him any particular training. He belonged to a gang of boys that were always playing, and first got to running after the ball and bringing it to the pitcher. When I first come across him he was center field of a nine, and knew so much that he would grab a ball and to any base they told him to. I've seen him jump and take a foul on the first bounce. I practiced with him first with slow balls on the fly, and his teeth are fixed so that a ball just fits in; and the best part of it is that he seems to like it, and now never misses a ball that he can get to in time.

Buried Alive.

Chambers' Journal.

A young officer returned from China related, apropos of burying alive, the following experience: "On our passage home," he said, "we had in the transport besides our own troops a large draft of French soldiers. Disease soon broke out among the closely packed men, and deaths were of daily occurrence. The French dealt summarily with their dead. As soon as a poor fellow had breathed his last, he was stripped, a 20-pound shot tied to his heels, and his body thrust into the sea. John Bull's prejudices rebelled against such rapid proceedings. When we lost any of our comrades they were allowed to be for twelve hours covered with the union jack, and the burial service was read over them before they were committed to the deep. One day a French sergeant, who had just fallen a victim to the pestilence, was brought up on deck in the sheet in which he had died, to be thrown overboard. The twenty-pound shot had been fastened to his feet, and the sheet removed, when, in pushing him through the porthole, he was caught by a protruding hook or nail at the side, and stuck fast. A few more vigorous thrusts sent the body further through; and in so doing the flesh was torn by the hook, and blood began to flow. The attention of the bystanders was attracted to this, and, moreover, they fancied they saw about the corpse other startling symptoms. The man's alive' flew from mouth to mouth. In an instant willing hands were pressing eagerly to the rescue, and, before the body could touch the water it was caught and brought up on deck. The French sergeant was one of the soundest men on board of the transport ship when we landed."

Emily Faithful says there is no country in the world in which husbands are so good, so kind and affectionate as in the United States.

The Courier-Journal has discovered that as Bayard's name contains six letters, and Blaine's the same number, in the event of Bayard's nomination, [illegible] of one and half a dozen of the other.

An Efficient Remedy

In all cases of Bronchial and Pulmonary Affections is AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. As such it is recognized and prescribed by the medical profession, and in many thousands of families, for the past forty years, it has been regarded as an invaluable household remedy. It is a preparation that only requires to be taken in very small quantities, and a few doses of it administered in the early stages of a cold or cough will effect a speedy cure, and may, very possibly, save life. There is no doubt whatever that

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Has preserved the lives of great numbers of persons, by arresting the development of Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, and Pulmonary Consumption, and by the cure of those dangerous maladies. It should be kept ready for use in every family where there are children, as it is a medicine far superior to all others in the treatment of Croup, the alleviation of Whooping Cough, and the cure of Colds and Influenza, ailments peculiarly incidental to childhood and youth. Promptitude in dealing with all diseases of this class is of the utmost importance. The loss of a single day may, in many cases, entail fatal consequences. Do not waste precious time in experimenting with medicines of doubtful efficacy, while the malady is constantly gaining a deeper hold, but take at once the speedies and most certain to cure,

DR. C. McLANE'S

Celebrated Liver Pills

In offering to the public Dr. C. McLane's Celebrated Liver Pills, as a remedy for Liver and Bilious Complaints, we presume no apology will be needed. The great prevalence of Liver Complaint and Bilious Diseases of all kinds throughout the United States, and particularly in the West and South, where, in the majority of cases, the patient is not within the reach of a regular physician, requires that some remedy should be provided that would not in the least impair the constitution, and yet be safe and effectual. That such is the character of Dr. C. McLane's Liver Pills, there can be no doubt. The great success which has invariably attended their use, will, we think, be sufficient to convince the most incredulous. It has been our sincere wish that these Pills should be fairly tested, and stand or fall by the effects produced. That they have been so tested and that the result has been in every respect favorable, we call tens of thousands to witness who have experienced their beneficial effects.

DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS

are not held forth or recommended, (like most of the popular medicines of the day), as universal cure-alls, but simply as a specific for Liver Complaints, and those symptoms connected with a deranged state of that organ.

TUESDAY MORNING JULY 1 1884

EXPECTATIONS AND ISSUES

As we go out of June into July with almost a month since the nomination of Blaine and Logan everything is apparently going along easily toward the regular republican victory. The bolters despite their efforts to start and magnify a movement against the ticket find themselves a smaller body than on the day they met and resolved to wait for the democrats to make their nomination. This resolution to wait was a good one for them to make since it gave opportunity for them to think seriously of the step they were taking. Many of them have announced as the result of sober second thought their determination to support the republican ticket as usual and doubtless more will arrive at the same reasonable conclusion within the next eight days, the remainder of the self imposed waiting season. By the time the democrats get together at Chicago the remnant of the bolters will wonder how it ever happened that they said anything about joining that crowd and the bourbons will go on as usual and do their worst without comfort or assistance from the republicans.

We have never believed much in all the talk about democrats turning to republicans or republicans to democrats. The men who have grown up in either party are likely to remain with their political friends for many reasons. Of course there is no denying the fact now that many foreigners who cannot be said to have grown up with any political party in this country will naturally turn to the republican ticket at this time as many of their recognized leaders have already done and advised them to do. This will surely be the case and it will greatly strengthen the republicans in Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York city and New Jersey, places where foreign born voters are both numerous and well posted.

In the South from which there is some reason to expect accession of votes we can see foundation for much of the hope that is expressed in the fact that those who have come to the voting age within the past four years are young men with some slightly Northern and many highly flavored North American ideas. They can see no good for themselves in following the old Bourbon course and many of them can see a very hopeful future which may result from turning in and making such a lively campaign as will take their states out of the old hands and bring themselves to the front. These young men will enjoy a brilliant campaign which is the political education of the south. An extensive and vigorous plan of campaign has been agreed upon as to West Virginia, North Carolina, Florida and Virginia. These four states have a combined electoral vote of thirty three which cast for Blaine would well nigh make up for the loss of New York. As far as can be ascertained the Blaine managers are shrewdly providing against the latter contingency in all of their plans and calculations. Colonel Parsons who is a native of Vermont and for many years a resident of West Virginia is now taking an active interest in pushing the Blaine canvass in both the Virginias. The above named four states selected to make a deep political incision into the Solid South are considered by the Blaine leaders as close and susceptible of being carried by good management and an aggressive well conducted campaign. They claim that the influx of northern republican settlers into Florida in the last four years has so largely increased the republican vote that they will gain an easy victory in that state. The contest for congressman at large in North Carolina in 1882 they say shows that state to be close and doubtful and they believe that with a proper application of the sinews of war and skillful tactics it can be carried for Blaine. As for West Virginia it is confidently counted upon for its six electoral votes next fall. Blaine is said to have large mining and railroad interests in West Virginia and consequently a host of friends in both political parties who will do all they can to carry the state for him.

In the northern and centrally republican states pretty much the same old issues will be made and nothing done or proposed by the democrats will induce any republicans to turn to their party for anything desirable. Those who have been republicans will continue to be republicans as every good citizen ought to be. They stand facing the democrats in the genuine old way and they will vote them down in the old way.

There may not be as much occasion as there has been in the past to talk during the campaign about the overbearing and tyrannous conduct of the democratic majorities in the old slaveholding states though it is still the truth that such a thing as a fair election is unknown in some districts in Virginia, Louisiana and other southern states. This need not be a campaign issue though something should be done to see that the great evil is corrected and even during the campaign some crime under this head should stand charged up to the democratic party. There is something to admire after all in the Cromwellian persistency with which those who know of the wrongs committed in some southern districts refuse to keep quiet on the subject for the mere sake of conciliation. They want no conciliation until after there has been fair play and a fair count and they are right in keeping the charge on the books until the democrats treat negro republicans in the south with the same fairness politically as they do influential whites.

The democratic failure to do anything in the way of reducing taxation will be an issue, the necessity for a reduction furnishing an argument for keeping the republican party—the only one to which the country can look for anything in this direction—in power. If the democrats were violently opposed to giving relief they could not have done more to maintain an unnecessary collection of money into the treasury than they have done during the present session in which they have had ample opportunity.

Other issues will arise as the campaign progresses and as party clash provokes charge and counter charge as has been the case in the past. The republicans will be more aggressive than in any campaign since Grant was elected the second time and Blaine himself will be within easy call whenever there shall be occasion to consult. July is not much of a campaign month outside of the grand and all pervading oratory of the Fourth when every city village and pleasant grove is made to ring with patriotism yet we shall see the Blaine sentiment growing all the time and the opposition dwindling until it is left unconsidered like a field too scant for harvesting.

The Ohio supreme court in its last decision with reference to the Scott liquor law seems to have avoided the main question, the constitutionality of the entire law—and at the same time to have made the law worthless by rejecting that paragraph which provides for the collection of the tax from irresponsible dealers. Hereafter only those dealers who have property can be prosecuted successfully if they fail to pay. Those low dives kept by the bummers and ringsters will continue in the business and as they have nothing they will escape, as criminal proceedings cannot be brought against them.

Queen Victoria's rigorous prohibition of social festivities since the duke of Albany died causes lots of growling, says the London Truth. The royal family is numerous enough to form a small regiment and it is rapidly increasing. If then, this sort of public penance is to be ordered whenever a death takes place the time will come when the country will be in a state of permanent mourning.

Mr Blaine was more shrewd than many of his ardent supporters have been in making no allusion to republican dissatisfaction, in his response to the committee which notified him of his nomination.

A LIBEL ON THE SOLDIERS

Senator Sherman had the courage to say that he should not vote for Senator Ingalls amendment to the pension bill to which we referred a few days ago and that the quotation from a political platform shall not change his views. It was simply the motive of the demagogue which led Senator Ingalls to say that he proposed to test which of the great political parties of this country is most favorable to the rights of the surviving veterans of the war for the Union. In order to show the state of public opinion as he phrases it he reads as follows from a letter written by a member of the Grand Army of the Republic: There are 1,400,000 of us now. We have a powerful organization and we can carry this country on this issue now. This house of representatives will vote for this bill or we will elect a new house that will. This senate will vote for it or we will elect a senate that will. We are not democrats or republicans but we are soldiers and we mean business now. We doubt the authenticity of this letter. It was probably written by some pension agent or some politician who is anxious for soldiers votes. There are not a quarter of this number of members of the Grand Army of the Republic. In all our relations with members of this organization we have never heard a word of such opinion as that letter expresses. General Hawley correctly represented the sentiments of the Grand Army when he said the old soldiers are not beggars nor do they desire to bankrupt the country which they offered their services and for which they were ready to die. They do not ask this.

The government has shown unparalleled generosity in bestowing pensions upon its soldiers. The total number of enlistments during the war was 2,360,000. Of these it is estimated that there are 1,500,000 still living. Up to June 1883 712,406 applications for pensions had been made. This amounts to more than one third of the number of enlisted men and nearly one half of the number surviving. In other words every other man now living who enlisted whether for thirty days or four years is drawing a pension or has applied for one. Since the pension law of 1863 was passed under which the disabled soldiers of the rebellion were granted pensions congress has made fifty different changes, all in the interest of more liberal pensions. These extravagant pension bills are chiefly inspired by motives of the demagogue and political cowardice alone gives them success. The real principle upon which it is proposed to have many millions paid out through the pension bureau is demoralizing. In old times pensions after a war were lavished on feudal retainers or hangers on at court. Now as it is the great body of the people which has to be kept good natured the surplus is to be divided among them. The Philadelphia Times calls upon the old soldiers to protest against these corrupt schemes which are put forward in their name. They must know, it says, that when pensions which were never dreamed of in this or any other country shall have raided the treasury and loaded an already oppressed people with scores of millions of additional taxes there will be a sweeping popular revulsion against the whole pension system and it will strike by all the lines of justice to the ground. And it will do more. It will stain the most honored soldiery of the world with needless shame. If they would not be clouded with shame by adventurers and demagogues who steal the soldiers name to degrade it to contempt in a nation that has been ultimately generous and patriotic, [illegible] they must speak and speak bravely against the pending bills in congress. We protest for one and as the representative of the vast majority of old soldiers [illegible]. The effect of these raids upon the treasury in the name of the soldiers will be to destroy the sentiment of patriotism [illegible] and make it impossible to recruit another army in case a war should arise except through an appeal to base and mercenary motives. The politicians like Ingalls have no higher conception of the soldier than this but they are mistaken. The time has not yet arrived for the establishment of a Prætorian Guard in this country.

Senator Sherman does not think much of the platform as a guide for senators in the performance of their sworn duties. It was made up in a few hours time on a sweltering hot day by forty two men suddenly called together most of whom never saw each other before and he thought it an extraordinary spectacle that it should be attempted to make it a guide. He had as much respect as anybody for the opinions of his party but it was the congress of the United States that under the constitution must prescribe the laws for our country. The Mail and Express sees in this a fresh necessity for such a letter by Mr Blaine as will cover the deficiencies, explain away the inconsistencies and rectify the blunders of the platform. If Senator Sherman can safely kick away the rotten pension plank of the platform without the slightest ceremony why should not the chosen and strongest leader of the party make his letter of acceptance the real platform of the party and get rid of the Chicago rubbish?

Of course none of these extravagant pension schemes would be thought of if we had no surplus in the treasury. The lust for public money grows as the surplus increases and the worse the steals the stronger the backers thereof in congress. As President Arthur tersely said in vetoing the river and harbor steal of 1882—Thus as the bill gets worse by added steals the more numerous its support. The first duty of congress is to reduce taxation so that there will be no surplus to corrupt the country.

In his farewell address to his fellow citizens nearly a century ago Washington said that it is our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world. The great rule of conduct for us in regard to foreign nations is in extending our commercial relations to have with them as little political connection as possible. The experience of the century has confirmed the wisdom of this policy and we do not believe the people of this great republic demand a departure from it at the present time.

Ex Governor Brown's book written to explain why he is a republican will contain 101 pages. But the reasons are not there for which the mass of the party are republicans. Mr Brown is an old public functionary who has held office ever since he joined the party and believes in Judge Thurman's theory of keeping at least his own toes warm. He has also no disposition to give the boys a chance to warm theirs. He is a republican because he has a good seat inside near the fire.

Betting the fool's argument has hardly begun yet though an offer to bet any sum from one hundred to ten thousand that Blaine would be elected found no takers yesterday.

THE HABITS OF THE SALMON

FORT SPOKANE June 2

To the Editor of the Oregonian

As you live in a country not very far from where there are thousands of salmon caught in fresh water streams, will you please inform me through your paper if you can whether all the salmon which run up those streams which are not caught or killed in other ways go back to the salt water or whether they all die up those streams. This question has been argued so often here lately that I thought I would take this means of having the question decided. READER

[This is one of the questions to which no one can give a definite answer. There are various opinions on the subject. Some people are of opinion that the salmon which go up the rivers never come down. It is certain that many of them die but it is not probable that all or even a majority of them do. It is not possible to observe the habits of fish as carefully as those of animals as they are seldom in sight except when dead. It is the opinion of the most noted naturalists that the greater part of the fish after spawning return to the sea. It may be remarked here that our fishermen are paying more attention to the matter of how to prevent the salmon from getting up the rivers than to what becomes of them afterward.

THE NARROW GAUGE LEASE

PORTLAND June 30 1884

To the Editor of The Oregonian

I have read in your issue of this date the article which is reprinted from the Boston Advertiser. The article bears traces of official inspiration and therefore arrests attention. It is an evident attempt to justify the position assumed by the lessees and backed up as it is by extracts from official documents the article may be regarded by people in Boston unacquainted with the circumstances as affording a plausible defense of a strange proceeding.

The Boston management of the Oregon Railway and Navigation company fortify themselves with the opinions of Mr Morrison and Mr Tweed. Of Mr Morrison's report it may be remarked that it is characteristically American. Speaking of the Oregonian road he says: It seems to [illegible] better than a successful blackmailing enterprise. The charge is unwarrantable and [illegible]. The scheme from its inception was a [illegible] enterprise however mistaken [illegible] a blackmailing operation. If it was the latter, who was to be blackmailed? It could not be the present lessees who have no competing line in the Willamette valley and with whose railroad system it had no connection. An insinuation so [illegible] may be dismissed without further comment. But the same gentleman proceeds: If [illegible] in any way in which the lease can be set aside it certainly ought to be done, the transaction being [illegible] such a character that the lessees and [illegible] found [illegible] in the plight of honor. Coming from the quarter it does this is nothing less than astounding. If this lease was a [illegible] undertaking then the word [illegible] the English vocabulary [illegible] the initial overtures to enter into the [illegible] came from the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company themselves. The lease was concluded after the [illegible] by both of the parties to it and was executed with all the solemnity known to the law. It was even declared valid [illegible] of the Oregon Railway & Navigation company's own attorney. In the face of all this Mr Morrison [illegible] the repudiation of the contract as the [illegible] to affirm [illegible] the [illegible] character of the lessees [illegible] It can only be said that if the lessees have been defrauded they defrauded themselves.

But there is the opinion of Mr Tweed [illegible] in all the usual formal legal phraseology. It has too much the resemblance of being manufactured for the occasion.

For strange as it may appear the decided reason which the [illegible] what [illegible] in this instance. It would serve no good purpose however to discuss legal questions in the newspaper, [illegible] particularly seeing that they are [illegible] to be the subject of judicial determination. [illegible] it to say that the point now raised was held as settled indubitably by all [illegible] who [illegible] Mr Tweed [illegible] him. It would be [illegible] to the point therefore if the lessees would [illegible] frankly come forward openly and say to the court: May it please your Honor we have made a bad bargain for ninety six years. [illegible] we pray you [illegible] from its obligations. Whether the court would be moved [illegible] The question however is one of considerable international import [illegible] for if sacred contracts are to be repudiated and treated as so much waste paper whenever it suits one of the contracting parties, that party too at whose express solicitation they were entered into, then it must be evident to any ordinary mind that confidence in American investments will be rudely shaken. JUSTITIA

Speaking of the sagacity of animals, said Mr. Marrowfat: I never thought my dog Bruno had much intelligence until last Sunday when he followed us to church and slipped unobserved into the pew. I should rather accept that as an evidence of his piety, interrupted the visitor. What proof did he give of his sagacity? Why he slept during the whole sermon.—Brooklyn Eagle.

AMUSEMENTS.

OPERA AT NEW MARKET.—The opera bouffe company which opened at New Market theater last evening could in no wise complain of their reception. Notwithstanding the circus drew over 10,000 people under their tents, the theater was full, only a very few of the most undesirable seats being empty. The audience too quickly passed a verdict of approval and warmly applauded one and all of the performers. Of the opera itself a brief sketch has already been published. Those who had previously formed a high opinion of its attractive and interesting qualities were not disappointed on witnessing the first performance. Still more pleasure there might have been had it been possible to have surrounded the players with the beautiful and fantastic scenery which had been brought with the company from New York. But the New Market stage had not room enough above it, by five feet, and to cut down several thousand dollars worth of scenery was equally out of the question. So the piece was produced with only the ordinary scenery of the theater, but the magnificent costumes made one forget that anything was lacking. Following is the cast of the principal characters as the piece was originally produced in New York:

Jupiter	Father of Gods and Men	Digby Bell
Aristeus	A Shepherd	[illegible] B Grant
Pluto	King of the Lower World
Orpheus	Famous for his skill in music	Harry Pepper
Styx	Porter in Hades	George G Boniface Jr
Eurydice	Wife of Orpheus	Marie Vanoni
Juno	Wife of Jupiter	Laura Joyce Bell
Cupid	The Little God of Love	Miss [illegible] Mollie
Public Opinion		Miss Augusta Roche
Diana	Goddess of the Chase	Miss Jennie Prince
Venus	Goddess of Beauty	Miss Annie Caldwell
Mercury	Messenger of the Gods	Miss Jennie McNulty
Minerva	Goddess of War and Wisdom	Miss Maud Waldmere
Hebe	Waitress in Olympus	Miss Daisy Murdock
Morpheus	God of Sleep	W F Dodson
Mars	God of War	Hen? Leone
Vulcan	God of Fire	George Gans
Bacchus	God of Wine	Miss Albertina Hall
Aesculapius	God of Medicine	E H Aiken
Apollo	God of Music	Miss Clara Primrose
Janus	Porter in Olympus	Andrew Metzger
Hercules	God of Strength	Wm Silver
Cerberus	Guard of Hades	Master Murdock

The idea of the king of gods being a comedian of the first rank as well as a most woefully henpecked husband is indeed a novel one and furnishes a key note to the greater part of the fun in the piece. The effect of the [illegible] which he interprets [illegible] as most of them are fresh and enjoyable, is to bring forth uproarious laughter. His song "In Other Respects We're Doing Quite Well" received an encore. Juno, the wife of Jupiter, and the ruler of that mighty individual, was an excellent portrayal, and the [illegible] of these two were the highest [illegible] burlesque acting. Orpheus and Eurydice, the only mortals who appear, have the most prominent parts as singers, the former possessing a pleasing tenor voice in addition to his skill upon the violin. Eurydice is the living embodiment of grace and loses none of her superiority even when in the society of the handsome [illegible] the stately Minerva, the active Diana and the [illegible] Mercury. [illegible] the majestic [illegible] of all is the stern unrelenting idea of [illegible] Public Opinion, and she towers above all the others in her womanly [illegible] the savage [illegible] of War. Pluto, King of the Lower World, who wins the affections of Eurydice while masquerading on the earth as a shepherd, has the heavy [illegible] part of the piece and does it well. Last, though not least in the remembrance are the two charming sprites who represent Cupid and Hebe. Their continuous love making is never obtrusive or overdone, and the pretty duet between them that ends with a kiss was received with three encores. Orpheus and Eurydice [illegible] from all of [illegible] language [illegible] actions [illegible] bright, fresh and sparkling musical concert and is produced by a very talented operatic company.

BRIEF MENTION.

M[illegible], the bicyclist, has withdrawn from further connection with Willamette park.

The W. C. T. U. ladies will continue their raspberry supper this evening. Black raspberry shortcake, meats, vegetables, cake and coffee from 5 to 8 P. M., all for 25 cents.

Henry Buell of Corvallis has been arrested by the U S marshal on a charge of selling liquor to Indians. Buell is an Indian himself and some one is likely to be arrested on a charge of selling him the whisky.

Chas Young and H McVeagh, military prisoners from Fort Coeur d'Alene en route for Alcatraz in charge of Lieut. Arrasmith and a guard, were lodged in the city jail last evening for safe keeping till the steamer sailed.

Many who are expecting to witness another parade of the circus this morning will be disappointed. The parade will not be repeated owing to the great amount of work incident thereto and which does not permit of everything being put in so good order for the afternoon performance.

Jacob Hoffman, residing on the macadamized road, was arrested last evening on a charge of assault and battery preferred by his wife. If Jacob's fair mother had not held his hand upon his wife with a club she would probably not have been able to make a complaint against him.

The half mile foot race, two best in three, at Willamette Park last Sunday was won by [illegible] Lyon, of Salem, beating Hamilton fifty yards. In last Sunday's bicycle race for amateur cup was won by Hatch for the second time. He has to win it once more to be final owner. The race to come off next Sunday.

The engine house and hall formerly occupied by companies No. [illegible] of the old volunteer fire department, on First street in front of Union block, Messrs. [illegible] and [illegible] will do the [illegible]. It will seem strange to see these buildings devoted to business purposes instead of being used by the fire department.

PERSONAL.

J. A. Kelly of Lafayette is in the city.

Alfred B[illegible], advance agent of the Bijou opera company, left for San Francisco by last night's steamer.

Sam R. Irwin and Alfred Anderson of this city and Captain W. T. Powell of Dayton, who went east with the Child excursion, returned [illegible] day.

P. W. Sheehan, theatrical manager, arrived from San Francisco by the steamer last night. He is looking well but says the climate of San Francisco has kept him almost ill all the time he has been gone and it is the Oregon air that has revived him now.

COLE'S CIRCUS.

HOW PORTLAND WITNESSED AND ENJOYED THE GREAT SHOW

An Audience of Seven Thousand in the Afternoon and Two Thousand Turned Away at Night

There are circuses and circuses. The one that showed here yesterday was a regular Fourth of July, only it came a little early in the season, but it will make room for three in one week. It is not coloring the matter to say that nothing in the amusement line ever visited this remote corner of the United States that created even a shadow of as much excitement as Cole's circus has done. That $10,000 one hundred page picture, the covering of every dead wall in town with flaming posters, the multitude of fine lithographs, the pamphlets and the buglers, the advertisements and the local notices did not go for nothing. Not only did Cole's circus create more excitement than all other previous amusements combined, but more than any free outdoor show on record. The number of people who paid a dollar to get inside the mammoth tents yesterday was probably greater than the crowd who saw the sham battle in South Portland just a year ago without paying a cent. Indeed, the circus was the event of the year.

THE PARADE.

By nine o'clock in the morning the excitement began to rise, and when the procession had passed it was at fever heat. Anything in the way of a parade, just so it has reasonable length and is headed by a brass band, even if seen for the hundredth time, will attract attention. Imagine then what fascination there must have been in a parade of strange sights, particularly for children who had never seen the Barnum and Forepaugh's back east, like several thousand children of larger growth had seen. Streets along the entire line of march were crowded, with spectators, and an outside view only sharpened the desire to get an inside view. Besides a long line of handsomely painted cages, there were two band wagons and two bands, a steam calliope and an immense car drawn by a team of [illegible] camels two abreast and another drawn by a team of four elephants tandem—the oriental animals covered with rich trappings; a Roman chariot with four beautiful white horses driven abreast by a woman, the stallions, the Shetland ponies and a clown and an open cage containing four lions ready to tear to pieces and eat up their master, who sat inside. If any one wants a more attractive show without paying for it he's mighty hard to please.

THE GOOD ORDER

The crowd of hangers-on which indirectly drew upon the show the severest criticism from the Montana press did not make their appearance here. Where they have disappeared to no one knows, but it is pleasant to say that not a single visitor was in the least wise annoyed by employe or outsider. In the afternoon ladies without escort and children were not jostled at the ticket wagon, in the menagerie or in the main tent, and there was far less importuning from the sellers of concert tickets and refreshments than one is accustomed and resigned to.

To watch the treasurer sell tickets was a sight of itself. People could not come to the wagon, pass up their money and then get away as fast as he could hand out the pasteboards with the correct change. He keeps both arms moving like a wind mill, swooping up the change with the same motion that swoops in the coin and delivering the change and the ticket with a single motion, and he never makes a mistake.

THE MENAGERIE

On entering one finds himself in the first of the menagerie tents capable of holding about 2,000 people and allowing each one a view of the large circle of cages containing the rare animals. They have been enumerated in the advertisements and it is sufficient to say that every one advertised is here and not one of the cages contains a commonplace specimen. In the next tent communicating between the first and the circus tent are the herd of elephants including Sampson, the herd of camels, the Shetland ponies, the cage of lions and the white hippopotamus. This tent alone is a great show. Everything was fresh and clean and there was complete absence of unpleasant odors bespeaking first-class management of the menagerie.

THE CIRCUS

After all the ring performance is what everyone goes for, and it may be truthfully said that for once an audience went away without saying "It's the same old thing." A manager might spend $50,000 a week in salaries and he could not engage talent which will give a performance that does not bear some resemblance to some other circus performance, however, he can secure some novelties and the very best of old-style attractions. Cole has done this and he does not give a single dull act. That is saying a great deal. There are three rings or more properly speaking two rings and a platform or stage between them. With this arrangement all waits between acts are avoided and in two hours one gets to see what it [illegible] ring would take an entire afternoon. Here is a record of what was performed yesterday afternoon, just an unvarnished statement—naught set down in gratitude for courteous treatment to our representatives:

First. The customary cavalcade and the parade of the animals, better than customary because they were larger and filled all available space.

Second—The Australian Blondin who rides a bicycle on a wire fifty feet high, the Livingstone brothers doing a fine double trapeze act under him. As his [illegible] the bicyclist balances on his head on the [illegible] and fires a revolver. It is a little too daring for nervously inclined people.

Third—In ring No 1 the five elephants with Sampson in the center form great pyramids. Then two of them waltz to the music of a band, [illegible] played by a third, and as their [illegible] tread with four feet upon barrels and roll them around the ring without once falling off. At the same time two [illegible] in ring No 2 [illegible] leaping through all sorts of tricks, and [illegible] one horse leaping over the other and through a hoop of fire.

Fourth—A troupe of acrobats, two of whom, John Quigley and Bert Richardson, turn double somersaults over four elephants and six camels ranged side by side.

Fifth—Ansel Van Zandt, the bounding jockey, who does a number of feats upon a bareback horse. For instance he dismounts, runs alongside the horse and jumps astride of him without touching his hands to the animal.

Sixth—A dancing clown. The man who invented a novelty in the clown line is entitled to the medal.

Seventh—The Austrian sisters in a great double trapeze act requiring nerve and skill. One sister makes a long swing, turns a somersault and is caught in mid-air by the other sister hanging head downward from a trapeze.

Eighth—Mlle. Amie accomplishes the impossible feat of walking head downward from the ceiling. Just how she does it everyone does not know, but all have the liberty to guess.

Ninth—Miss Allen Cooke does the customary bareback riding. It is proper to remark that there is no pad riding in the show.

Tenth—Children are amused by a manufactured giraffe who seems to be too well trained, as he runs into the audience and picks up a boy in his arms.

Eleventh—The Martelle brothers do a clever act upon one bicycle.

Twelfth—Dunbar and Vernon in a flying trapeze act show to what extent scientific athletes may risk their limbs. In addition to several remarkable feats which cannot be described on paper, Vernon makes a leap of thirty feet in mid air catching upon Dunbar's outstretched arms. This feat is little short of marvelous.

Thirteenth—The Arabs. As tumblers they do not excel their white brethren as a rule, but their [illegible] gyrations are interesting to watch. One of the number does wagon wheels around the ring without touching hand or head. Their pyramids, however, are wonderful and as a chef d'oeuvre one man allows eight others to climb upon him and he also stands there weighted upon by ten or more [illegible] is a very handy word sometimes.

Fourteenth—Leon in one ring and Cooke in the other do various somersault acts on bareback horses, and a [illegible] double trapeze act hiding up the time while the horses are resting, usually allotted to clowns' old gags which this show has [illegible].

Fifteenth—Abdallah, one of the Arabs, appears in a full dress suit and while standing with one foot on a [illegible] without a balance [illegible] comes [illegible] a full fledged Arab. Four gymnasts in ring No. 2 give an excellent act on triple horizontal bars and the three Livingstones do a fine [illegible] act in ring 3—all these going at the same time, so that a visitor has to keep his eyes busy to take them all in. Twenty-three separate acts thus far and the show not near over.

Then came the three Austins in capital roller skating, six trained stallions, trick ponies who [illegible] a six horse riding act by Leon and a five horse act by Van Zandt and other features.

The circus entertainment closes with Conklin entering the cage of lions—all four in one cage—putting his head in their mouths, feeding them raw meat from his hands, beating them back when they are too greedy.

THE ATTENDANCE

In the afternoon the main tent was comfortably filled, between 7,000 and 8,000 being present. At night the tent was literally packed a quarter of an hour before the performance began, and ticket selling had to stop. The audience must have numbered 11,000, and at least [illegible]000 were turned away. The Washington street line ran cars by fives and twos that not able to pass on switches. Of course they did an immense business all day. A number of busses and express wagons carried full loads at ten cents a head, while carriages and hacks were sought by those who could bear the expense.

There will be a performance this afternoon and another to-night. To-morrow the circus goes to Salem.

FROM ASTORIA

Farewell Sermon of Rev. J. V. Milligan—Narrow Escape from Fire—Blasting Accident.

ASTORIA, June 29

The Rev J. V. Milligan, for five years acting pastor of the Presbyterian church of Astoria, having accepted a call from the church at Ashland, had been announced to preach his farewell sermon in this city this evening. Owing to the pleasant relations and good fellowship existing between the reverend gentleman and his ministerial brethren the other churches were closed for the purpose of making it a union service in the Presbyterian church. Half an hour before the service was to have commenced the sexton began lighting the church, and had just finished lighting the kerosene lamps in a heavy six light chandelier, when the hook in the ceiling sustaining its weight gave way and it fell to the floor with a crash, scattering the lighted oil over the pews, cushions and floor, all of which were ablaze in a moment. Providentially the sexton had been called out an instant before the service was to commence. Messrs Milligan, Boyce, Hume and Dickson, hearing the crash [illegible] to the scene ... the flames had already extended to the woodwork of the pews with every prospect the building would be destroyed. After giving the alarm, three gentlemen seized the carpet [illegible] and [illegible] another [illegible] the way to prevent the [illegible] and using the [illegible] in the mouths of the [illegible] they kept [illegible] in the shape of a [illegible] hands of the altar. [illegible] which subdued the [illegible] the time the firemen were ready [illegible] it was not necessary and the church was saved from being destroyed.

It was a loss all and the [illegible] for kerosene [illegible] not exceed $100.

The Congregational church was [illegible] and after the excitement [illegible] by the fire was over, Rev J. V. Milligan preached his farewell sermon before a large [illegible] their number limited only by the capacity of the church. Mr Milligan during his [illegible] in Astoria has made [illegible] of friends [illegible] He takes with him to his new [illegible] labors at Ashland [illegible] the wishes of the people of Astoria.

Between [illegible] and 4 o'clock on Saturday afternoon a blast was fired in the deep cut being made on [illegible] street. The face of the cut is [illegible] forty feet high and extends already into the hill twenty-five feet, leaving a solid rocky wall on each side of the cut. The Western hotel, owned by E. S. Dugget, stands north about 150 feet almost fronting the cut where the blasting is carried on. Although several blasts have been made, some of them with heavier charges than that of Saturday last, no accident has occurred or damage resulted until the [illegible] referred to.

Most of the blasting has been done in sandy rock, a small charge easily [illegible] several tons. On this occasion a deep drill had been made [illegible] rock which proved to be hard and solid. [illegible] pounds of black blasting powder was used, and when fired it exploded with a loud report, sending forth huge pieces of rock from the deep cut as if they had been fired from the mouth of a cannon. Every window and door in the south end of the Western hotel was demolished. Large pieces of rock fell through the roof in several places, tearing away the rafters, passing through the ceiling and rattling the floor below. One large rock, which had afterwards to be broken in order to be removed, fell through the roof and landed on a bed which only fifteen minutes before had been vacated by a fisherman preparatory to going forth to his nightly toil. This rock weighed about 500 pounds. Bain's steam sash factory in the rear of the Western hotel also suffered damage. A 2-pound stone found its way through the roof of Pike Brothers' paint shop three blocks and two streets distant from the blasted rock. Notwithstanding all the buildings in the vicinity had the appearance of having sustained a siege of shot and shell, it is gratifying to be able to state that no one was killed, no one was crippled, no one suffered the slightest bodily injury. That it should be so is truly miraculous considering that there must have been at least two hundred persons in close proximity to the scene of the explosion.

Class song with orchestral accompaniment by Lalla R. Dalton—Our Memories are in the Past, Our Work is in the present, Our Hopes are in the Future.

The day is at hand, the hour draws near
When we must bid our last adieu;
There comes to each face a smile, a tear,
As o'er the past we glance anew.
Hours spent in the school room,
Dear friends of our youth,
Our toil intermingled with pleasures,
The teachers who've led us
In wisdom and truth
All prize we as memory's best treasure.

Our school days are o'er, new life begins;
The golden dreams of youth are past;
As he who is valiant the battle wins,
We'll work, nor falter to the last.
We'll mindful of duty,
We'll true to our best,
Right, honor and justice defending,
With truth as our watchword,
We'll trust for the rest
And bide what shall come with the ending.

The world in brightness before us lies
As we go forth to meet our lot;
The green be the path and sunny the skies,
Our school days shall not be forgot.
And now while we strengthen
In friendship fond ties
That bind us to joys never ending,
With hearts full of sadness
And tear bedewed eyes,
Our song with farewells must be blending.

LITERARY EXERCISES BY INDIAN CHILDREN.

FOREST GROVE, June 30

During last week Dr. Minthorn, superintendent of the Indian school, issued invitations to the citizens of Forest Grove to attend an entertainment to be given on Saturday evening by the Indian Club literary society. At an early hour the seats were all full, the exercises commencing at 7:30 o'clock. The walls of the chapel were tastefully decorated with evergreens, and at the rear of the stage the words "Indian Club Society" were exquisitely fashioned in letters of green trimmed with shimmering tinsel.

At the opening of the exercises Dr. Minthorn explained that the programme was arranged entirely by the Indian children and was in fact a purely performance prepared by those employes of the school. Programmes had been neatly printed and he wished to the visitors on entering the building and he would have it known that the printing of the programme was the work of the children—even the press used was purchased with money earned among themselves. The idea of the superintendent is to have the children do the work, the services of employes are valuable not because of what they themselves may be able to do but because of their ability in planning and directing, and seeing that the actual work itself is performed by the children.

The evening's exercises consisted of orations, essays and dialogues interspersed with music both vocal and instrumental. [illegible] characters were [illegible] and [illegible] were [illegible] pleased. [illegible] several of the recitations were [illegible] Following is

SILENT SINCE 1812.

Cannon Which Recall the Days of the Bould Privateers.

HALF BURIED AT COENTIES SLIP

The Mystery of Long Tom—Silas Whitney's Recollections—A Thrilling Story of a Twenty Four Pounder

[New York Herald June

Half buried in the sidewalk just back of the rounded curbstone at the corner of South street and Coenties slip, stand two old cannon one a twelve, the other a twenty four pounder. Their sides are seamed and chipped and covered with flakes of rust. Stones and refuse fill their bores, but their mouths have been kept smooth and bright by the trousers of three generations of loungers who have sat upon them as they talked politics business and war for the last seventy years—for the cannon have stood there since the war of 1812. Within two blocks of them scattered along the edges of the sidewalks on Coenties and Old slips South and Front streets stand perhaps a dozen more—carronades and twelve pounders—some yet standing as upright as old soldiers, many broken and leaning to one side as if tired a few sunken so far that only a foot or two of their length protrudes above the flagging, and all of them unnoticed by the throng that hurries past day after day, to the warehouses and docks around them. The slip about a year ago was filled in by the city and South street was continued across its mouth. On the space thus made a game of ball was being played yesterday afternoon by two rival clubs of gamins. At a critical moment in the game the ball was knocked over the high wooden fence that surrounds the lot and came down on the head of a vicious looking horse which was drawing a dray across the

NEWLY MADE BULKHEAD

Before the negro driver who was half asleep could grasp the reins more tightly the horse had dashed across the bulkhead to the corner where the two companion cannon stand and striking the front wheel against the curbstone sent the driver headlong from his seat. He struck on his head against the larger of the two cannon, lay in the gutter for a moment, and then, as the bystanders hurried to him, expecting to find his skull crushed in, he picked himself up and went on swearing vigorously to where the horse and truck had been stopped.

"That's a surprising escape," said Silas Whitney the oldest ship chandler in the city as he looked out of his window on the other side of the slip and saw the accident. "That negro was luckier than poor Alderman Waite—when did that happen? Well I remember the date because his funeral took place on the day Andrew Jackson was elected. That was in 1828 just after I had started in ship chandlery business, up at the corner of Old slip and Front street" and Mr Whitney ran his fingers through his thin white hair.

"How fast time goes! It don't seem long since we boys used to play leapfrog over those cannon in 1817 and 1818. That lamppost wasn't in the way then—there were no lamp posts till years afterward—and the boy who could jump over the big cannon and then clear the smaller one with one more leap was a 'bully' for they used to be higher then by a foot or more. I suppose the jarring of the trucks for so many years has made them gradually sink lower."

THE PRIVATEERS OF 1812

"Were they there as long ago as 1817?" asked a Herald reporter.

"Yes, they were put there a year before that. You see when war was declared against England in 1812 all the iron we could get was melted down into cannons. Even the iron railings in front of the houses were taken, the people were in such a hurry to fit up privateers and get a chance at the British merchantmen. There must have been as many as 300 privateers started out from this port, and all of them were armed with from one to two dozen carronades or twelve-pounders, two or three twenty pounders and a long swivel gun. When the war ended in 1815 the privateers were turned into peaceable craft again and the cannon taken out of them were so many that they filled up the junk shops and lay in piles along the wharves. Nobody wanted them except for old iron and a good many of the merchants and captains who had been engaged in the privateering, wouldn't sell their barkers to be broken up into junk. So they planted them at the edge of the sidewalks before their houses where they served not only for trophies of the war but for hitching posts as well."

"Were there many more of them then than now?"

"Bless you ten times as many. The streets and slips from the foot of Whitehall street up to Peck slip were lined with them. But they're gone, like the rest of the old things in New York" and Mr Whitney ran his fingers through his white hair again and looked rather melancholy. "You see," when a house was torn down and a store or warehouse built in its place the old sidewalks were torn up and the cannon carted away to some junk shop. There aren't more than a dozen left now, and they are all near here. I keep count of them—they seem like old friends. There used to be a big swivel gun up at the corner of Old slip and South street. The breech end was uppermost and around the touchhole was an inscription in some

STRANGE LANGUAGE

I have never seen since. It looked like Persian or Hindoostanee. Probably it had been captured from some British East Indiaman, and no one knows in what old wars hundreds of years ago it may have served before it was taken by the English from its original owners, away off in India."

"What became of that one?" asked the reporter.

"No one ever knew" said Mr Whitney, a puzzled look coming over his wrinkled face. "It stood there for a good many years. I used to spend hours sitting on top of it wondering what the inscription meant. Somewhere about forty years ago just before the Lopez filibustering expedition to Cuba there was a mysterious looking brig fitted up in the slip here with all sorts of munitions of war and a lot of foreigners were always around her. One morning it was discovered that she had disappeared, and the old long Tom also—nothing left but the hole in the sidewalk. I have always thought that the brig was connected with the filibusters and that seeing what a fine old piece it was, they had taken it with them. If they did it may now be in some old Spanish fort down on Cuban soil where the bones of poor Lopez and all his men have been lying for so many years. You may not believe what I'm going to say now" Mr Whitney continued after a short pause during which he filled a long stemmed clay pipe "but it's true. That largest cannon over there on the corner once held $2000 worth of diamonds for over a year and a half. It was in '26. A wealthy southerner named Beauvais had a fine old mansion on Hanover square which he lived in during the winter. Robbers broke in one night when he was away. His wife heard them and gave the alarm but they got away with her diamond necklace. Two watchmen happened to see them running down Old slip and gave chase. It was a bright moonlight night and both of the pursuers saw the diamond necklace glitter in the hand of one of the thieves, but when they overtook them, just around the corner over there, the necklace had disappeared. All the neighborhood was out the next day looking for it, but not a trace of it could be found. At last nearly two years afterward a boy lost a shilling down in the inside of the big cannon and in fishing for it he brought up the necklace.

BREAD OR BLOOD

That cannon has seen stranger things in its day, and the strangest one I witnessed was during the bread riots of '37. The panic had just come, no business was being done and I believe that fully half the poor in the city were starving that winter. The price of flour was extremely high, both because of the poor crops all over the country—or what there was of it, for we had no grain producing West then—and because of the speculating clique of rich produce merchants who held enormous stocks of it and would not begin to sell until the price had risen from $7 to $12 a barrel. At last there was a mass meeting in City Hall square late one afternoon in February and the end of it was that the people—ten thousand of them—rushed down to Hart's big flour warehouse, on Washington street near Dey, sacked it, tumbled all the flour barrels out into the street and knocked in the heads. Then they came across here to Coenties slip to burn down Meeche's [illegible] as well as yesterday the great throng of the ragged, miserable wretches surging down the street, men women and children the men carrying torches clubs and cobblestones the women some with their aprons full of flour, but many of them carrying clubs like the men, and all with sunken cheeks and hollow eyes that shone in the flaming torch light like the eyes of wild beasts. They came on till all the streets around were full. When they reached Meeche's place they tried to burst in the door but it was made of iron and barred inside. They battered away at it and the iron shutters with cobblestones yelling cursing and screaming—it was a frightful sight"—and the old man closed his eyes for a moment as if to shut it out.

"Just then they saw [illegible] get in that way, and some one of them proposed to dig up the smaller cannon over there and use it as a battering ram. They had actually pried up the curbstone next to it and would have had it out in two minutes more when a part of the Twenty ninth regiment with Colonel Stevens at its head and a strong force of constables arrived and after a short struggle drove them away. They went up that same night and burned down St Philip's church in Centre street and eleven houses in the Five Points.

IN DRAFT RIOT TIME

"And here comes in a page of the history of the draft riot of '63 which has never been told before" said Mr Whitney after taking half a dozen puffs. "You know the whole lower part of the city was in the power of the rioters during the first two days. On the third day the police began to make headway against them and this maddened the rioters so that a party of them actually dug up one of the carronades which stood up at the end of Old slip and was apparently in perfect condition. They cleaned it up loaded it with nails and scraps of iron, put it on a handcart and started up to Mulberry street."

"Did they use it?" asked one of the listeners.

"They used it but not against the police. They stopped at a saloon up on Burling slip and all got drunk. Then one of them thought he would show the others how to blow the police to pieces. So bringing the carronade to bear on a tenement house where a great many negroes had lived he touched it off with his pipe."

"What happened then?"

"Well, the breech had been in the damp ground so long that the heavy charge was too much for it and it burst blew nine of them to pieces and just served them right. They'll soon all be gone. In a few years not a cannon will be left. There is so much tearing down and changing things going on now although I guess these two over there on the corner will be standing after I'm gone. But I'm tired now. I've talked a great deal for an old man of 84" and with a last look across the slip at the scarred and battered twenty-pounder he leaned back in the chair and closed his eyes.

QUEEN RANAVALONA III

How the New Sovereign of Madagascar was Crowned

The Standard's correspondent at Antananarivo writing on the 22d of November describes the coronation of Razafindrahety the new queen of Madagascar under the title of Ranavalona III and her presentation to the people. The ceremony took place on the plain of Imahamasina, in the presence of many thousands of people, principally school children, all the men and even the youngest schoolboy wearing arms. The queen's body guard consisted of picked boys from the high school. The plain about one thousand feet long by as many wide, is at the foot of the high hill on which stands the royal palace and as the young queen appeared on one of the balconies of the palace in full view of the multitude below she was received with frantic enthusiasm and excitement while at the same moment a salute of twenty one guns announced to all that the first part of the important ceremony had taken place. The next part of the ceremony took place the following day at Andohalo where is one of the sacred stones on which the queen has to stand and where the foreign residents were invited to meet her. Her majesty is described as quite young, of a most pleasing expression of countenance singularly dignified and ladylike. She wore a dress of ivory satin with much gold embroidery. When she had taken her stand on the stone with the gold crown on her head the Prime Minister called for a royal salute, he himself kneeling before her with a manner perfect in gallantry. He is her wedded husband and old enough to be her grandfather. Then a young Prince about 7 years of age made a speech to the Queen, welcoming her to her kingdom. Her majesty then proceeded to the plain of Imahamasina which was closely packed with people, the hills to the north south and west were also crowded and there could not have been fewer than half a million people present.

The queen was conducted to the chair of state on a small table by her side being a large handsomely bound bible. A salute was fired and the whole people assembled shouted their welcome. After this the queen rose and addressed her people in a remarkably clear and sweet voice. She said, briefly that she had succeeded to the throne with all its duties which she engaged to fulfill, the people on their part were to fulfill theirs. She had received the whole island. Not a part of it—its boundary was the ocean on all sides, not a bit of this would she give to any one, no not the breadth of a hair, and woman though she was she would be like a man in the defense of her kingdom. Then turning to her people and striking the ground with her golden rod of state said "Is this not so? Oh my people." Then came a mighty answer as of one voice from all those people "Izay!" It is so. And then followed a scene baffling all description, the shouts of the people, the clashing of spears and shields, the firing of cannon in various places along the crowd while precisely at the same moment several vivid flashes of lightning in the west lent a still more impressive air. Her majesty went on to say that the foreigners who were [illegible] on friendly relations with them would be well treated and finally she declared that she only recognized Jehovah as her God. Upon Him she also rested her kingdom and the fear of Him was the beginning of wisdom. The representatives of the various tribes then presented to the queen a dollar in token of allegiance and the prime minister who has been the husband of two former queens having spoken the ceremony came to an end. Her majesty afterward entertained the foreigners and many of her subjects at banquets.

INTEMPERANCE IN GERMANY

An Enormous Consumption of Beer and Other Drinks

Springfield Republican

The theory that the devotion of the Germans to beer saves them from the evils of intemperance is being sadly exploded. The last year has witnessed a considerable revival of temperance agitation in Prussia in regard to which our consul general at Frankfort Ferdinand Voegeler presents some interesting facts in the last bulletin of the state department. The consumption of beer in Prussia has risen to the enormous amount of 57.6 liters per head annually and that of ardent spirits to ten or eleven liters per head far exceeding the American rate of consumption. The liter is a little larger than the quart so that the Prussian consumption of beer is from 20 to 25 gallons per head against about 10 gallons in America, while the consumption of spirits there is about [illegible] gallons against [illegible] in this country including what is used in the arts. These estimates of the American consumption are derived from the returns of the internal revenue office and may vary for different years. The number of open drinking saloons in Prussia has increased from 120 000 in 1869 to 165 000 in 1880; ardent spirits were sold in 93 000 of these being 1 to every 101 inhabitants. Of the crimes committed in five years 41 per cent were committed under the influence of liquor and 7 per cent of the pauperism is due to intemperance. In Germany it is clearly established as it is everywhere that the multiplication of saloons increases intemperance.

The liquor laws of the German states have been a dead letter under the empire and the evil of intemperance has thus got the upper hand but a recent debate in the Prussian house of representatives on the guzzling of university students and the activity of temperance societies indicate a new awakening. The Gottenburg system is under discussion but the tendency is more toward the Dutch system corresponding to our limited license. A few years ago the alarm over increase of intemperance in Holland from the multiplicity of grog shops led to the enactment of a law fixing a maximum number of saloons per capita of the population for places of various dimensions. Cities of 50 000 people or more are allowed one saloon for every 500 people, cities of from 20 000 to 50 000 one to 400, from 10 000 to 20 000 one to 300 and all smaller places one to every 250. Consul General Voegeler thinks German opinion favors this system.

It is interesting to note that Lars O Smith the Swedish Brandy King who has turned temperance advocate subscribes to the doctrine that the fewer the public houses the less drunkenness you will have, the more places where men can drink the more they will drink. He is opposed to the Gottenburg system which he says is corrupt and moreover promotes the consumption of impure liquors. He made a fight against it by starting an opposition at his distilleries on the river near Stockholm and carrying the people to his resorts free by steamer. The Swedish brandy is distilled from potatoes, and requires expensive rectifying. Mr Smith favors the licensing of a few places at a high fee—$1000 a year—and is active in introducing savings banks co-operative kitchens and other institutions for a working class. He has perhaps done [illegible]

Intellectuality in Women

Intellectuality counts more in the scale of womanhood in America than it does in England says Mr Hatton in giving a book upon his impressions of the [illegible]. It is easier for a clever woman to excite the admiration of her sex in America than in England. A woman who adorns and lifts the feminine intellect into notice in America excites the admiration rather than the jealousy of her sisters. American women seem to make a higher claim upon the respect and attention of men than belongs to the ambitious English women and when one of them rises to distinction they all go up with her. They share in her fame. They do not try to dispossess her of the lofty place upon which she stands. There is a sort of trades-union among the women of America in this respect. They hold together in a ring against the assumed lords of creation and the men are content to agree [illegible]

TRADE AND COMMERCE.

MONDAY June 30

A quiet feeling appears to rule along the street to day although a fair trade call is had. Outside business is more or less neglected for inside work necessary to the close of a month. Bright weather adds greatly to the crop outlook and present dullness will soon give way to a better condition of affairs. Eastern financial journals speak more hopefully of the country's trade and find more excellent reasons for expecting sure recovery in due time.

Overland receipts include 174 cs canned goods, [illegible] 50 bbls sugar 8 cs sauce, [illegible] 4 bxs hams 10 cs axle grease 2 cs cheese 36 cs lard [illegible] lemons [illegible] 50 bxs 90 kgs nails 179 pkgs tobacco 30 hf 20 bxs beer

Charlotte Cushman's Originality

Philadelphia Record

[illegible] was Miss Cushman's rule that she had [illegible] and that she always tried as far as possible to do a thing in what seemed to her the most natural and lifelike way. He has very pleasant recollections of Miss Cushman and spoke of her as a very great actress. He said even then [illegible] there was an actress who fought out her part and never did anything in a careless manner. It must be remembered that before Miss Cushman played the part of Meg Merrilies that it used to be played by ordinary ladies. When she acted it the first time in New York at the Winter garden she dressed herself in the worst looking rags she could find, painted wrinkles all over her face and arms and made herself look as much like an old witch as it was possible for anything human to be. When the manager of the theater saw her he was horrified with horror and insisted that an audience would never accept such a terrible looking old witch as that. They had been used to an entirely different sort of Meg Merrilies and audiences are great sticklers for tradition. Miss Cushman however would not listen to what he said but insisted that he should let her show her representation of the part to the audience and if they disliked it she would not listen to it, then she might do differently. She went into the little tent on the stage and every one who has seen her in that part will remember the little spot of moonlight that falls at the tent door and the way Miss Cushman in her rags and leaning upon her broken staff springs out upon it. The effect is electrical and it was so from the very first night. Although the audience had never seen such a rendition of the part it was carried away from the moment she burst upon its view and she held it spellbound as she always did from her first entrance to her exit.

ECHOES OF THE PANIC.

The Desirable Elimination of Mushroom Millionaires

Two years ago it was well said by an observing English traveler that New York possessed as many gentlemen of leisure as London or Paris says a letter to the Philadelphia Press. Indeed it has been no uncommon thing for anyone traveling abroad or conversant with the contents of our past papers to notice the hints thrown out that the rapidly increasing number of millionaires in America threatened the republic and was the basis of a stepping-stone toward a limited monarchy. Nature has now relieved the country of the mushroom millionaires who fortunes have evaporated like the water of the [illegible] with which they have carried on successful speculations for the past four or five years.

The [illegible] extravagance, reproverbial his improvidence and recklessness. His indifference to money was the [illegible] more [illegible] in his successful [illegible]. Of all business men or trade [illegible] the [illegible] is prominent for the length and size of his bills. He [illegible] from $5 000 to $10 000 in the course of a [illegible] to be bothered with ordinary bills from his butcher his baker and candlestick maker. And here it is that the genuine sufferer in a panic falls. Many a wail [illegible] for the thousand [illegible] Wall street will be traced [illegible] away into the [illegible] who never knew [illegible] heard anything of Wall street.

A haberdasher opened a place in the vicinity of Wall street a few years ago. During the flush times of 1880 81 he coined money. His most expensive articles found the readiest sale. His bills were always readily paid. Last year he closed up shop and sought quarters less conspicuous. [illegible] He informed me that five well known Wall street men were indebted to him for over $4 000. A butcher who provided meat for several expensive establishments [illegible] that $5 000 from four of his best customers would about balance his cash [illegible]. A well known Fifth avenue tailor laments the loss of not as many thousands of dollars but the customers themselves, who are now seeking smaller fields and pastures green.

Last summer and fall it was an open secret that many of the more impecunious members of the board had mortgaged their seats for sums ranging anywhere from $300 to $10 000. At that time the price of stock exchange seats ranged from $20 000 to $25 000, with an additional $10 000 to the widow in the event of a member's death from the gratuity fund. The panic caught many mortgagees at a very inopportune time. It is pretty safe to say that the panic has caused more broken stock brokers and bankers than in any other trade or business in the city or perhaps in the country. The Wall street man and his wife but [illegible] knows that the time is coming when his creditor [illegible] the baker and the butcher the hatter and the [illegible] will go through the mill too.
